DEAR COLLEAGUES,

It is to our great pleasure to announce that the takes place once again in Hungary. The first international conference was held in 2009, where high standard lectures were followed by electing Prof. Joe Jordan and Prof. Kari Syrjanen as honorary members of the society. The aim of our present congress is to show international procedures throwing new light upon cervical pathology.

Beside HPV diagnostics the main focus of the congress is on biomarkers as well as on theoretical and practical introduction to colposcopy and the integration of these new methods to the screening protocols. In certain European countries the HPV DNA test, as a primary screening method revolutionized cervical cancer screening by mirroring the biological behavior of the illness, giving a precise picture of the carcinogenesis of cervical cancer. The international surrounding gives a good opportunity to get to know different, country specific protocols. Beside the scientific session the program gives valuable networking opportunities.

Therefore we are convinced that the Conference will provide an interesting and useful platform not only for gynecologist and other anogenital cancer prevention experts, but other colleagues from related fields such as cytopathologists, proctologists, epidemiologists, and microbiologists. The site of the Conference is the center of Budapest, with a fabulous view over the city rich in monuments, historic buildings and the majestic Danube ornamented with several great bridges. During your stay you may enjoy the thermal waters of several spas originating from the Middle Ages and visit the colorful, vibrant Great Market Hall. We hope that the scientific and cultural values of the Conference will provide substantial experiences and adventures, and the traditional Hungarian hospitality and the famous culinary delicacies will further enrich the time you spend here.

We look forward to seeing you in Budapest.
